

perfectionist

Taking the time to listen to patients has been the foundation on which Dr. Daniel P. Markmann has built his successful plastic surgery practice. "Not all patients need or want the same thing. There are options as to what can or needs to be done for every patient as an individual. We discuss these options, then together we come up with a plan." He has been called a "perfectionist" by his patients and the staff he works with due to the attention to detail he gives to every patient, especially in the operating room.

"Discerning attention to detail and safety
are important parts
of our practice."

—DANIEL P. MARKMANN, MD

Board certified and experienced in a wide array of procedures, the 13-year veteran understands the personal aspect involved with plastic surgery; and therefore, he typically devotes one to two hours to initial consultations. "I like to make sure I clearly understand a patient's concerns and goals prior to surgery," says Dr. Markmann. "I also use this time to establish a close, comfortable rapport so patients feel free to discuss what features they would like enhanced." Like Dr. Markmann, his staff also ensures that each patient's needs are met. Moreover, if it requires coordinating concierge services to transport patients before and after surgery or introducing new patients to previous clients who underwent treatment with Dr. Markmann, the staff does whatever it takes to make certain patients are content and satisfied with the level of care provided. To increase patient comfort following surgery, Dr. Markmann often uses pain pumps. "Pain pumps can make a great difference in pain relief post-surgically, especially during breast augmentation and tummy tuck procedures," says Dr. Markmann. "Discerning attention to detail and safety are important parts of our practice."

It's not a great surprise that Dr. Markmann ended up in the medical field considering the fact that six of the seven children in his family have followed a medical career path. The artistic nature of plastic surgery is what drove him to his chosen specialty. "Plastic surgery is creative and requires artistic talents in addition to scientific knowledge and familiarity with the anatomy of the body," says Dr. Markmann. "Plastic surgery entails making people look better on the outside, which can in turn make them feel better on the inside. Facilitating such a positive boost in one's appearance and self-esteem is the most rewarding part of what I do."

ACHIEVING A MORE BEAUTIFUL BUTT

Ideal for those with small buttocks, a BRAZILIAN BUTT LIFT can be just the ticket to bigger, more robust buttocks. "At 24 years old, my patient wasn't suffering from laxity or droopy skin, but she still faced her own cosmetic issues, as she requested a more shapely butt that was fuller, more balanced and aesthetic, which she now enjoys."

When Dr. Markmann first saw this 39-year-old in consultation, she explained how she wanted to make her buttocks larger and enhance their projection. The solution: a Brazilian butt lift. "The surgery doesn't just involve enhancing the buttocks through FAT GRAFTING; it also involves body contouring via LIPOSUCTION."
